* Produced from the process of upcycling from food and juice production.

Upcycling is the process of transforming by-products, waste materials, or unwanted products into new materials or products of higher quality or value. Upcycling focuses on repurposing items without fundamentally altering their original form, giving them a second life and new function.

Upcycling offers numerous benefits for communities by reducing waste, fostering economic opportunities, and promoting community engagement. It minimizes environmental impact, supports local economies, and strengthens social bonds through collaborative projects.

Phytoverse has been a proud support over many years of communities throughout the world that have repurpose the seeds that were waste into new never seen fatty acid oils. These oils have many applications in the cosmetic, nutraceutical, pharmaceutical and food & beverage industries.

Notes

1. Due to seasonal variation essential oils may vary in chemical composition, colour and odour from season to season. Difference in the origin and purity of botanical material, distillation apparatus and storage conditions can also have a significant effect on quality. To minimize these variations many oils are subject to standards set by government authorities or the supplier. Where such standards do exist, Phytoverse will supply oils to our customer's specifications.
2. Whilst most essential oils are supplied as single distilled, some oils are subject to further processing to remove impurities or standardize their composition for specific applications. This can entail a variety of processes ranging from filtering and blending to re-distillation, fractionation, reconstitution and bleaching.
3. Prices may change without notification due to seasonal variation or supply.
